Thank you for your inquiry regarding the California Proposition 65 Warnings.

Proposition 65 is a law that requires the State of California to publish a list of chemicals it knows to cause cancer, birth defects or other reproductive harm. This list has grown to over 800 chemicals.

Proposition 65 also requires businesses to provide a warning before knowingly exposing someone in California to a listed chemical unless exposure is low enough to pose no significant risk of cancer, birth defects or other reproductive harm. However, because Uline does not manufacture any of the products we distribute, we do not always know whether a product is exempt from the warning requirements. As such, if we are aware or believe that one or more of the listed chemicals are present in a product, we will provide the warning if the manufacturer has not already done so. While warnings are required only for products sold or distributed in California, some manufacturers and distributors find it is easier to place the warning on all of their products. As a result, you may have received a product with a warning even though you do not live in California.

A warning, in itself, does not mean a product is unsafe or in violation of any product-safety standards or regulations. The warnings are simply required in order to notify Californians that a listed chemical is present in the product.
